CALVIN COOLIDGE DIES AT NORTHAMPTON HOME LEAVING NATION SHOCKED BY UNEXPECTED LOSS

ROOSEVELT FINDS HOPE OF AVOIDING SESSION IN PLAN

Congressional Leaders and President-Elect Agree on Means of Balancing Budget at New York Conference.

WILL KEEP LEVY ON GAS AND OIL

Savings Proposed Will Wipe Out Deficit With Additional Income Under New Taxation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)— Democratic congressional leaders at a conference tonight with President-elect Roosevelt determined upon a program to balance the budget by increasing income taxes and continuing the federal gasoline levy with a view to avoiding a special session of the new congress.

In addition, the conference went on record for enactment of the beer bill at this session which it was estimated would return $125,000,000.

The gasoline tax was estimated to return $137,000,000 and the increase in income taxes and the lowering of exemptions were estimated to return $200,000,000. The plan is to cut exemptions of married men to $3,000 and of single men to $1,000 and raise the tax on the first $4,000 to 12 per cent, and on the second to 12 per cent.

The program also called for a reduction of $100,000,000 in appropriations for the coming fiscal year.

To Overcome Deficit. These items were accepted by the democratic chieftains to meet an estimated $492,000,000 deficit anticipated by the present administration in the fiscal year 1934, exclusive of the sinking fund for the retirement of the public debt.

The conference in President-elect Roosevelt's town house broke up at midnight and Speaker Garner and Senator Robinson, the floor leader, acted as spokesmen.

The program which Senator Robinson "jilted" was practically unanimously adopted.

The senator said that it was the thought of the conference that with the end of this program to balance the budget, along with the enactment of the farm relief measure now under consideration in the house, that all probability an extra session of the new congress could be avoided.

Communists Parade.

A considerable crowd surrounded the Roosevelt home tonight for the first time since his arrival in New York on Tuesday.

After photographers had concluded making pictures of the congressional group on the front steps of the home, a shout was raised from a group of demonstrators standing on the opposite side of the narrow street. This

Tragedy in Hollywood To Have Happy Ending

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5.—(UPI) A Hollywood tragedy had a happy ending Wednesday with the announcement that Charles Morton, film juvenile, will marry Donna Wheelock-Rose, actress, this weekend.

The case who dropped with Miss Wheelock-Rose's recovery and repentence. Today Morton, who formerly was married to Lyra Lys, Russian dancer, disclosed the contemplated marriage.

DRASTIC SLASHES MADE BY FULTON TO MEET DEFICIT

New 25 Per Cent Salary Cuts and Reduction in Personnel in Two Instances Are Announced.

Drastic reductions in Fulton county departments began Thursday when county commissioners lessened the pay roll budgets of eight departments by 25 per cent and reduced the personnel in two instances. The commissioners again will meet at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon to continue fixing the 1933 salary lists for 1933.

The 25 per cent reductions were made in the seven offices formerly under the fee system and in the pay roll for the clerks, bailiffs and attaches of the municipal court. Salaries of all judges will be allowed to remain as they now are. But with the exception of the former fee officers except two that their budgets be increased were ignored.

The tax collector's office, with a pay roll of $3,504, was cut to $2,895.

The tax collector's office, with a budget for employees' salaries of $2,677.50, was reduced to $2,008.12.12.

The committee voted unanimously to submit the amendment to state legislatures instead of following the recommendations of both party platforms to have it acted upon by conventions. Senator Walsh reserved the right to oppose this section.

The committee also voted that the resolution follows the outline laid down in the republican platform, rather than the democratic proposal for outright repeal.

To Oppose Plan.

Senator Blaine announced, however, that he will vote against the provision giving Congress the right to legislate against the saloon.

Chairman Norris said the full judiciary committee would consider the subcommittee report at its meeting Monday. He predicted it would "lead to a lot of discussion."

Intervening with members of the committee had disclosed overwhelming sentiment in favor of repeal, but wide difference of opinion on the saloon question.

In the office of the clerk of superior court the salary budget was reduced from $7,740 to $5,805. This 25 per cent cut to an overnight expense plan for the saloon.

REPEAL PROPOSAL GIVEN APPROVAL BY SENATE GROUP

Subcommittee Votes Four to One for Plan Protecting Dry States and Barring Saloon

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Labeled "approved" by a subcommittee, a prohibition repeal resolution tonight awaits early action by the senate judiciary committee.

Four out of five members of the subcommittee voted for the resolution to repeal the amendment, protect states which want to remain dry, and allow Congress to legislate against return of the saloon.

The full committee will take the measure up Monday and must vote on it before it reaches the senate floor.

There was little pomp or ceremony about the action of the committee which marks another milestone in the historic national controversy over liquor control.

Three members of the subcommittee gathered quietly in the big foreign relations committee room of the capitol and in less than half an hour walked out to announce their approval of the report of the subcommittee which had been a committee since prohibition went into effect 13 years ago.

Votes by Phone.

The two remaining members were reached by telephone. Senator Borah, Idaho's dry republican, reserved the right to oppose the measure in the senate.

Mills' Father's Estate Get $45,343 Refund

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—An abatement of $5,689.50 and a refund of $45,343 to the estate of Odgen Mills, father of Secretary Mills, for overassessment of estate tax was announced today by the internal revenue bureau.

The $74,000.00 controversy was reduced to $2,347.50. These two offices had not asked for an increase in their salary budgets.

The father of Secretary Mills died several years ago.

The internal revenue bureau, in announcing that the adjustment had been made to Secretary Mills' estate, said the amount of $5,691.803 was caused by the allowance of credit for state inheritance taxes paid after the federal estate tax return had been filed.

Mississippi Sales Tax Yields Even More Than Estimated

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 5.—(AP)—The Mississippi sales tax has produced more money than its advocates anticipated and Governor Mike Conner said it has restored the state's credit and paid for its additional reduction in the ad valorem tax.

The sales taxes produced $1,538,818.55 in 1932, some $236,000 more than the legislature's estimated yield of $1,300,000.

The state now is operating under its second sales tax act—an emergency revenue measure passed last year at insistence of Governor Conner, who had advocated a local sales tax since he first entered the governor's mansion and found his state facing a deficit of $10,000,000.

The emergency measure imposes a basic rate of 2 per cent on general retail sales and operated only eight months last year.

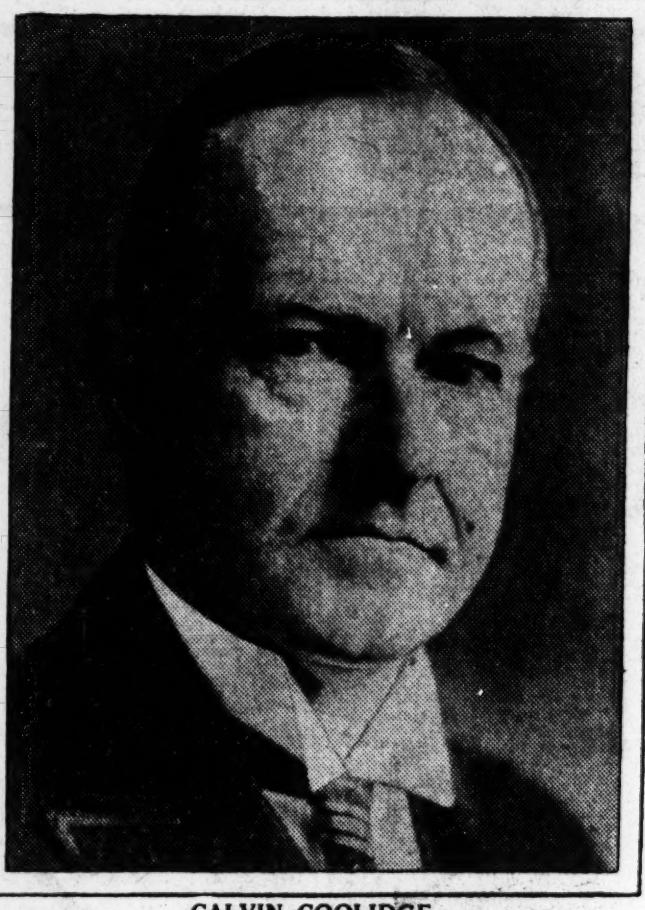

Concerns whose tax aggregates as much as $10 a month are required to file monthly returns and a yearly return. Businesses whose tax does not aggregate more than $10 a month are not required to file monthly returns.

All concerns that do not pay as much as $10 a quarter file only annual returns. Businesses are allowed to file annually.

The collections figure was not included in December collections, which will be received by the tax commission this month as returns are made the month following actual sales. Also the figures do not include annual returns of $1,200,000 sales exemption.

Wholesalers, public utilities, manufacturers and automotive groups pay at varying rates ranging from one-

CAPITAL, NATION JOIN IN MOURNING COOLIDGE'S DEATH

Official Washington Is Grief-Stricken as Passing of Former President Is Officially Announced.

ROOSEVELT SHOCKED BY COOLIDGE DEATH

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was deeply moved by the death of ex-President Calvin Coolidge, said: "I am incomparably shocked at the news of Mr. Coolidge's death. The nation suffers a great loss in his sudden and untimely passing. I shall never forget his generous and friendly smile, his good humor and his deceptively simple ways."

The deepest sympathy of Mrs. Roosevelt and myself goes out to his family."

By DON KIRKLEY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Amazement and sorrow mingled in a grief-stricken capital tonight as it united with the nation in mourning Calvin Coolidge, whose death shocked the White House, the congress and the citizen in the street.

President Hoover led the homage to his predecessor, issuing within a short time after word of the death reached Washington a public proclamation declaring a month of national mourning.

With an endless stream of condolences and regrets pouring from the capital to Northampton, the chief executive dispatched his own, and sent White House naval and military aides to the scene of the sudden death.

The president, meanwhile, made plans to attend the funeral.

Busy legislators, intent upon their tasks in the halls of congress, were startled to their feet by the quiet announcement of the death. In a few minutes, house and senate staff journeyed to the scene of the sudden death.

Speaker Garner named a committee of 15 to represent the house, headed

SCHOOLS SEEKING LABOR WILL FIGHT $74,000 FROM CITY FOR 5-DAY WEEK

Placing of Hour Additional School Day Deferred Until September.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Organized labor will favor a general strike, if necessary, said William Green, president of the Federation of Labor, today, to bring about universal adoption of the shorter working week.

Advocating the bill by Senator Black, democrat, Alabama, to establish a five-day week and six days in all manufacturing industries, the federation head created considerable surprise among members of a senate judiciary subcommittee when he said it was a question either of a vote, a universal strike or legislative action.

He called the strike "economic force" as compared with the third alternative of "legislative force."

When Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska subcommittee chairman, said a general strike would be "terrible" and that it should be avoided at all costs, Green said it was "through the exercise of economic force that we get relief."

"I shrink to think it necessary to take such steps, but industrial leaders refuse to take action," he added.

"Some have voluntarily established a five-day week, but they do so because they could not make ends meet. The application of the shorter work week in a few industries has no effect on the general situation."

He said organized labor did not want the vote and that as a first step in its program it would ask the senate to copy the bill.

"Then we will see what the difference is between the two bills," he said.

General establishment in industry of the shorter working time, he said, would create jobs for 6,500,000 men out of the 11,500,000 he

Youths Seized After Borrowing Car Of Detective To Haul Stolen Goods

Joe Morris, of Reid avenue, and Richard McWilliams, of a Crumley street address, were in the police station Thursday night—sadder but wiser youths about the matter of borrowing a car.

The boys, not knowing him, approached Lieutenant Detective Evans Thursday morning and asked him to loan them his car to move some merchandise. The request was ok'd by the lieutenant. The boys drove off, along with a truck, from the Alexander Seewald Company several days ago. The truck has not been recovered.

Near Jonesboro the boys turned off the highway into a little used community road. Evans saw them begin transferring packages from a hiding place into the car. He covered them, handcuffed them and brought them back to Atlanta.

The merchandise, consisting of automobile accessories, was valued at several hundred dollars. It was stolen, along with a truck, from the Alexander Seewald Company several days ago. The truck has not been recovered.

Negro Child Injured.

Ruth Jones, 8, negro girl, of 391 Elm street, was struck and seriously injured late Thursday night by an automobile said by police to have been driven by Louis Harris, colored, of 307 Chestnut street. No charges were made against the Harris woman, witnesses having told police the accident was unavoidable. The child's shoulder, collarbone and ribs were broken.

News Lid Is Tightened By Richmond Officials

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Censorship of Richmond police news was tightened today as Chief of Police Robert C. Jordan imposed strictures on his precinct stations prohibiting them from issuing official information to newspapermen either as citizens or reporters.

Major J. Fulmer Bright, managing editor, refused to answer any official questions.

Briand's Ups and Downs in Fight For Peace Told by French Baron

Something of the ups and downs of Aristide Briand in his battle for world peace was unfolded to an audience at Agnes Scott College Thursday night when Baron Paul d'Estournelle de Constant, distinguished French novelist and diplomat, delivered the fourth of the winter series and going out with the fluctuation of French public opinion. Eleven times he was prime minister. His last political venture, at the impotency of close friends, was as a candidate for president. The result was not a victory.

His greatest achievement in the direction of peace, although in 1926 he was the winner of the Nobel peace award, was when 44 nations joined in signing the Briand-Kellogg pact to outlaw war. Baron de Constant said of his most peaceful nature, the paradox that Briand was not a lazy man—despite an appearance that sometimes lent the impression of physical inertia.

"Poor little League of Nations." On another occasion Briand, Baron de Constant said, likened the league to a "beautiful flower that you see for the first time and wonder if you will ever see it again."

As Briand grew older, the speaker said, he became more and more in faith in the part that women would play in bringing about world peace.

"In his early life he considered women the angel guardians of the home," the baron said, "but he came to view the influence of women on the probability of peace as extremely important."

For 25 times Briand was a minister in the French cabinet, coming in

BRANCH BANK SYSTEM DENOUNCED BY LONG

Glass Defends Measure as "Only Remedy" for Present Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—A denunciation of branch banking leaped out to meet the Glass banking bill today in the senate.

Baron Glass had the measure, with its broad provisions for changes in banking regulations and to prevent the use of federal reserve funds for speculation, reached the floor for debate before the democratic Long, of Louisiana, rose on his feet proclaiming that unless President-elect Roosevelt had changed his mind he would have to veto such a bill.

Long was demanding incorporation of an amendment to limit branch banking operations to the city in which the parent institution is located. He has pressed the amendment forward even before the veteran Senator Glass, of Virginia, a former democratic secretary of the treasury and author of the bill, had been able to claim the floor to explain the measure.

Long said the president-elect "has said he would not stand for concentration of banking resources."

The Louisiana senator began by saying he knew more about branch banking than Glass.

TWO WARDENS FILE BURNS FILM SUITS

$2,000,000 Damages
Sought by Troup, Campbell County Officials.

Two of the three damage suits expected to be filed in connection with the picturization of Robert Elliott Burns' book, "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," were filed Thursday in the city court. Both plaintiffs, Warden J. Harold Hardy, of the Troup county chain gang, from which Burns made his second escape, and Paul Phillips, warden of the old Campbell county gaol, asked personal damages totaling $1,000,000 each. The third suit is expected to be filed behalf of Judge Vivian L. Stanley of the Georgia prison commission. Assistant Attorney-General John J. Keay said Thursday that he would file the suit as soon as he returns to private practice next Tuesday.

The Hardy and Phillips suits were filed by Allen Post of the law firm of Howell, Heyman & Bolding. J. R.
Terrell, son of Greenville and Brown, and Howard of Atlanta will be associated with Mr. Kelley in the Stanley suit.

The petitions of Hardy and Phillips point out that there were characters in the picture made from Burns' book which were made to resemble them and reflect them in the light of officials who treat the prisoners under their care in a cruel and inhuman manner.

Warner Brothers, Inc., and the Vitaphone Corporation, producers of the film, and the Vitaphone Company, Inc., its distributors, were named defendants in both actions.

The Troup warden and the former Campbell warden charge that they have suffered damages as a result of what was shown at the Georgia theater here and in other cities in this state.

Burns was convicted in Atlanta in 1921 of highway robbery. He was sentenced to 10 years in prison, serving years on the chain gang but escaped after serving only a few months. He was captured in 1929 and returned to prison only to escape a second time in September of 1930. During his period of hiding he wrote a book, "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," from which the feature picture comes.

St. Louis, St. Louis, Mo., the film has been arrested in Newark, N. J., but he won his freedom when Governor A. Harry Moore of that state refused to honor Georgia's request for his extradition.

SCHOOL GAINS SHOWN IN REPORT BY DUGGAN

An increase of 28,201 in the average daily attendance in the public schools of Georgia was reported Thursday in the biennial report of Dr. M.
Duggan, retiring superintendent of schools, to the state legislature.

For the first time sweeping changes in the school system recommended by Superintendent Duggan and which were made public last week.

The attendance figures show that in 1931 the average daily attendance was 140,002, up 10,311 and increased to 157,333 in 1932.

An increase in the value of real estate holdings owned by the school department also was noted in the year,

the report says. In 1931 the real estate was valued at $45,880,000, but in 1932 it increased to $48,684,140.

A decrease in the cost of operating the state school system also was shown for 1932. Dr. Duggan reported In 1931 the total expenditures were $18,808,683 while in 1932 the expenditures totaled only $18,235,248.

Race for Speakership

L. T. (Pat) Gillen, of Bibb county, Thursday night announced he had released members of the lower house of the legislature, who voted for him for speaker and added "I am not a person to be jeopardized by anyone." The Hon. Ed Rivers, of Lanier, has, according to my investigation,
enough strength to be elected."

He said he had made "no trade or agreement of any kind with any candidate." He was elected from the presenting officer only such treatment as "might be deserved by my experience and efforts."

While releasing his pledges "in order that you might better your position than the house is organized," he did not allow me person to ambition to jeopardize your position." Mr. Gillen emphasized that he is not "withdrawing" from the race and indicated he expected to be in a position to accept and assume the house might take in regard to his candidacy.

The Bibb representative is now speaker pro tem. of the house and was not ready to say last night whether he would again be a candidate for that office in the event he is not chosen.

Other candidates for speaker are Ernest M. Davis, of Mitchell county, and Marion Allen, of Baldwin county.

THREE MEALS A DAY KITCHEN TESTED RECIPES by Sally Saver

For That After-the-Holidays Period.

After the round of holidays from Christmas to New Year's day, appetites become jaded and menu-making difficult. Yet that is just the time when the homemaker needs to provide extra-interesting meals for the family, meals with a kick, so to speak.

Meals with a kick mean meals with plenty of minerals and vitamins. All of the heavy pastries, cakes, cookies and other desserts for which tradition calls at the holiday time, the human body needs an extra allowance of alkaline-forming foods to counteract the superabundance of acid-forming foods. The alkaline-forming foods are found in the fruits and vegetables (except prunes, plums, cranberries and rhubarb), and these are the foods with which the family menus should be filled right now.

Plan an extra fruit for breakfast, make omelets and other light protein dishes with either fruit or vegetable accompaniments, serve plenty of fresh green or raw salads, and go in for fruit desserts, rather than puddings.

The homemaker who follows this information will save her family from many needless colds and other ills. Old-time remedies are available if sufficient vitamin and mineral foods are eaten, to supply the blood stream with the elements it needs.

At this time many families serve carrots and cabbage as the sole vegetables until the whole family tires of them. There are plenty of other interesting vegetables available, if not fresh, they surely in canned form.

Among the flavor is unusual, the flavor which it asks for more and more.

It is easily prepared—from the fresh okra, which is boiled until tender, then well seasoned with butter, salt and pepper. Some people like it scalloped.

Others like it steamed or canned.

It is a good side dish.

On the Air Today

In the elementary science class of the American School of the Air to-day pupils of the intermediate grades will be given a lesson in science by the stars. The session will be heard over the WGST-Columbia network from 1 to 1:30 p. m., a half-hour earlier than during the rest of the week.

Friday's class will also bring Dr. Charles Fleischer, current events commentator. The science lesson will again be presented in the form of the conversations and experiences of George and Uncle Henry.

Nino Martini will offer one of the most popular arias of his entire repertory, the Serenade from Bizet's opera, "The Pearl Fishers," during his recital with the Columbia Symphony Orchestra tonight from 10 to 10:30 p. m. over WGST and nationwide via Columbia network. Other selections will include "Ecco Ridente in Cielo," from Rossini's "Barber of Seville"; Paisiello's "Nel cor piu non mi sento," and the English lyric, "Twilight," by Glenn Howard, last conducted by the Columbia Symphony orchestra, will present Tchaikovsky's "March Slave," Delibes' "March and Procession of Bacchus" and Grainger's "Country Gardens."

John Kelvin, Irish tenor, will reveal his versatility when he opens his career with a matinée Italian aria, "Pur di cesti, O Bocca Bella," by Lotti, during the broadcast over the WGST-Columbia chain today from 4:15 to 4:30 o'clock. He will complete his contribution to the program with two ballads, "Piedra," by Kramer, and "Squire's melody," Dream Once Again," by Emery Duetts, conducting the accompanying orchestra, will feature his ensemble in two typical airs, "Irish Washerwoman," by Sowerby, and a medley overture entitled "Sounds From Ireland," by Bendix.

Mrs. Russel William Magna, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will speak over the Columbian Broadcasting System and WGST from 12:15 to 12:30 o'clock today. Mrs. Magna will give her address in the studios of New York. Her subject will be "A Message From the States." —

Tom Howard, droll comic, and his partner, George Shelton, return to the WGST-Columbia network tonight at 8 o'clock in another series of outlandish situations interpolated by the music of Leonard Hayton's orchestra and songs by Betty Barthell. Their foolishness will be punctuated with jazz rhythm, including the selections "You're Telling Me," "I Guess I'll Have to Change My Plans" and "Shine on Your Shoes," with Miss Barthal singing the vocal refrains.

Pocketknife Operation May Save Woman's Life

HENDERSON, Texas, Jan. 5.—(UPI)—Physical emergency operation performed with a pocketknife gave a diphtheria patient whose heart had ceased beating a new chance for life today.

A physician arrived at the home of Mrs. R. Taylor as she was being operated in an ambulance. He found she had "died from strangulation."

Using a pocketknife, the only instrument available, he slashed open her windpipe to remove the obstruction.

Treatment resulted soon in a slight pulse action and shortly afterward, slow breathing. She was taken to a hospital where the operation was properly concluded.

Mrs. Taylor was given an even chance of recovery.

DANIEL W. GREEN SUCCUMBS HERE

Dies at Home Here

Popular Figure in Typographical Field Dies After Long Illness.

Daniel W. Green, one of the most popular figures in the typographical field in the southeast and since 1919 assistant probation officer of Fulton county, died early Thursday morning at his home, 649 Berne street, S. E. Mr. Green had been ill for a period of years, which virtually had forced his retirement from active service in the county probation office.

Few men were better known than "Dan" Green in the printing sphere of the south. He was one of the most active members and largely responsible for organization of Local No. 48, Typographical union. For many years he was a familiar figure around Fulton courthouse, and was known widely both for his genial disposition and his leniency.

Served on Constitution.

"Dan" Green served his apprenticeship and many years service as a compositor on "The Constitution." He was young at the time of his admission, having gone through the University of Georgia school, from which he was graduated as a young man. After receiving his degree in law and being admitted to the bar, he returned to the printing trade for about seven years, but the smell of printer's ink was too strong in his nature, and he returned to his first love, remaining a printer for more than 40 years.

In May, 1919, he became assistant to the probation officer of Fulton county, serving for the first time in that capacity, supervising the trade he loved so well. Still retained his interest in labor circles, however, and his enthusiasm was largely responsible for the development of Local 48 of the I. T. U. in Atlanta.

Mr. Green served for eight years on the Atlanta board of education from the third ward; was former president of the Atlanta Typographical Union No. 48; was a delegate to the national convention of the International Typographical Union at San Francisco and at Cincinnati.

Born in 1870.

Mr. Green was born in 1870 and is survived by three sons, D. G. Green and F. Green of Miami, and Robert E. Green of Atlanta, three daughters, Mrs. L. C. Taylor, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. L. C. A. Bridenbecker, of Miami, and Mrs. Robert Williamson Jr., of Atlanta; and a brother, Charles Green, of Atlanta; several nieces and nephews, and a son-in-law, Harry G. Poole, will be held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Poole chapel, Dean Raimundo de Ovies and the Elder Ashland conducting. The blue lodge of Masons, Georgia chapter, will have charge of the ritual at the West View cemetery.

Buron Fitts was born in 1870 and is survived by three sons, D. G. Green and F. Green of Miami, and Robert E. Green of Atlanta, three daughters, Mrs. L. C. Taylor, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. L. C. A. Bridenbecker, of Miami, and Mrs. Robert Williamson Jr., of Atlanta; and a brother, Charles Green, of Atlanta; several nieces and nephews, and a son-in-law, Harry G. Poole, will be held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Poole chapel, Dean Raimundo de Ovies and the Elder Ashland conducting. The blue lodge of Masons, Georgia chapter, will have charge of the ritual at the West View cemetery.

Buron Fitts Is Robbed Of $122 in Own Home

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Two robbers with drawn weapons entered the home of Buron Fitts Wednesday night and, after listening to Fitts describe the penalties which could be inflicted on them for robbery, escaped with his bodyguard's revolver, escaped with his bodyguard's revolver, and $122 which Fitts had left him.

The robbers entered a rear room and forced a maid to precede them into the dining room, where Mr. and Mrs. Fitts, their six-year-old daughter, Mary Lou, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Davis, and Foster and William Shunk, bodyguard of Fitts, were eating dinner.

SOLONS WARNED ON FEDERAL AID

Riots Predicted Unless Government Direct Help
Is Forthcoming.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—A warning that riots and municipal debt defalcations impend unless direct federal aid is forthcoming was given a subcommittee today by Carl H. Chatton, executive secretary of the Municipal Finance Officers' Association, Chicago.

While he urged enactment of the La Follette-Coleman $500,000,000 job-creation bill, the Reconstruction Commission announced the lending of $22,450,074 to help meet distress conditions. The sum included $13,890,908 to Pennsylvania, $5,621,937 to Michigan and $2,565,833 to Texas.

Long 'Knows It All,' Glass Concedes Point

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Senator Glass said today—possibly with his tongue in his cheek—that it is undisputed that Senator Long knows more about every problem than other senators.

The colloquy came during debate of the Glass banking reform bill.

In characteristic fashion, Long attacked provisions of the bill, and remarked that he knew more about branch banking than Senator Glass, a former secretary of the treasury.

"It might shock the sensibility of the senate," the 75-year-old Virginian replied a little later, "to suggest that the senator does not know more about every problem we have been called upon to consider than the senator from Virginia or any other senator. That is the impression that I get. Therefore, on that particular point, there is no room for dispute."

third day of hearings on the direct relief measure, were accounts of desperate families in West Virginia's mining regions living on flour and water, of children being "turned adrift" because parents have no money and welfare institutions without sufficient funds, of cities blanketeted with indebtedness and paying their employees in scrip.

In his story of municipal difficulties, Chatters said there is emphatic need of finding a broader base of local taxation than real estate.

"It is increasingly true that cities are getting further and further back in their salary payments."

He expressed hope there will be no "wholesale defaults by cities on their obligations" but said "it remains as a threat."

Movement To Publicize State Advocated As Hotel Men Open Convention Here

Prominent Atlantans and visitors who were guests at a luncheon given by Cator Woolford in which the need of selling Georgia to Georgians and tourist visitors was stressed. Left to right, Ray Ross, president of the Georgia Hotel Men's Association; Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution; Mr. Woolford and Howard E. Coffin, owner of the Sea Island development. Staff photo by George Cornett.

A movement to make tourists and, incidentally, Georgians, conscious of Georgia's history and romance, was launched Thursday at a luncheon given by Cator Woolford at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Among the Spaniards present were the concession manager, Howard E. Coffin, owner of the Sea Island development; Ray Ross, of Dalton, president of the Georgia Hotel Men's Association, and Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution, and a large number of delegates to the Southeastern Hotel Exposition and the Georgia Hotel Men's Association convention, which opened in the afternoon. Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, of the Atlanta public schools; C. E. Kirkpatrick, secretary of the Chattanooga Automobile Club, and Roy L. Johnson, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, also attended and made brief talks.

Each emphasized the need of making known to the rest of the country, after first selling them to Georgians.

Mr. Howell, the first speaker introduced by Mr. Woolford, contrasted the hotel men on the able manner they conducted their business and sympathized with them on the business troubles they, in common with every other line, were suffering. He expressed the belief that the depression was lifting, and that better times were ahead. "Must Sell State to Selves."

"It is the duty of the hotel men to go on, 'first to sell the state to themselves, and then to their visitors.'

Georgia, in the use of publicity, should follow the example of California,

Mr. Howell said.

"If that battle had happened in Massachusetts," he continued, "an account of it would appear in every American school book. As it is nobody outside of Georgia seems to know anything about it. Once upon a time, in Massachusetts, the professor of history in the school told me he was intensely interested in this battle, but asked me if I could supply historical proof!"

"At that battle, Oglethorpe with 2,000 soldiers hidden in the marshes routed a superior force of Spaniards, reinforced by 225 ships," Mr. Howell reminisced. His historic speech went on to say that the Spaniards were kept in Florida and the Georgia line was established where it now is, instead of between Virginia and North Carolina, where it would have been had not for Oglethorpe's victory.

Mr. Howell, at Mr. Woolford's invitation, then proposed Mr. Coffin as a man who had done more for Georgia in advertising it than any 100 Georgians had done since the Civil War.

"I have found little trouble in selling the state of Georgia to the state in a book of its job," Mr. Coffin said. "I have suggested, for one thing, that Georgians capitalize Sherman's march to the sea, and get back in money from tourists something of what she lost."

"As an illustration of the lack of information about the state, you may say that the government health authorities list Brunswick as the healthiest of American cities. Yet in the school books there is a paragraph which says that Brunswick and the surrounding country because of its low altitude are subject to malaria and other fevers."

He described the process of making buildings out of old Spanish coins used at Oglethorpe's survey of Sapelo Island, which in 1780 showed the original Spanish missions. These, he said, were older by 200 years than California's. He said that Georgia had more historical and romantic interest than any other state, but advertised less.

He cited states like Maine and Michigan that made known their good qualities.

The state, he added, had been backward in its paving, but was rapidly improving in that respect. He urged that work on the east and west highways be pushed.

H. E. Chatton, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, was introduced. Dr. Sutton told of the elaborate plans being made for Georgia's bicentennial celebration. C. E. Kirkpatrick, secretary of the Chattanooga Automobile Club, told how his organization advertised his city. Roy L. Johnson, president of the Georgia of the Forward, Georgia Association, and Mr. Ross made a brief talk.

Key Welcomes Delegates.

The hotel men opened their general convention at their afternoon session, which was held on the Ansley roof garden.

The session was featured by an address of welcome by Mayor James L. Key and by the report of the president, Mr. Ross. The report of the secretary and treasurer also was heard and the delegates were taken on a tour of a wide range of exhibits on display. These exhibits were presented by the following companies:

Atlanta Envelope Company; Atlanta Callaway Mills; LaGrange; Harry F. Dobbs, Inc.; Atlanta; General Foods, Atlanta; Hunter Fan & Motor Company, Atlanta; Lang & Fritz, Inc., Atlanta; Libby Glass Manufacturing Company, Toledo, Ohio; Mayer Laboratories, Philadelphia, Pa.; R. K. Rambo Company, Atlanta; the Southern Hotel Journal; Wilson & Company, Chicago, and the Southern Dairies, Inc., Chicago.

The delegates and guests at the convention were entertained at a banquet Thursday night at the Piedmont hotel. L. W. Morris, hotel manager of the Piedmont, was toastmaster. No business was discussed at the dinner, it being a purely social function. After the dinner the guests were entertained by a number of local singing and dancing artists.

Two business sessions will be held today. Both will be at the Ansley. This morning's session will be featured by addresses by J. C. Buch, chairman of the National Protective Committee; Frank Schutt, vice president of the American Hotel Association, and W. C. Royer, of the Atlanta Biltmore.

The afternoon's session will be featured by a meat-cutting demonstration sponsored by Thomas E. Wilson & Company, Chicago packers. The demonstration will be in the Ansley roof at 4 o'clock with Chester A. Olsen, former Atlanta representative, in charge.

The annual banquet of the association will be held at the Ansley tonight. Harold Van Orman will be the principal speaker.

COPPLE BURN TO DEATH
WHEN AUTO HITS CAR

OPELOUSAS, La., Jan. 5.—(AP)—A man and a woman were burned to death here last night when the automobile in which they were riding ran into a freight car on a railroad crossing.

Impact of the collision set fire to the sedan and Nettie Gilchrist, 19, of Levee, La., was burned to death in the car. Her companion, Herbert Hill, 35, of Lemoyne, La., formerly a lumber inspector of Meridian, Miss., died from burns at a hospital shortly after the accident.

COPPLE BURN TO DEATH WHEN AUTO HITS CAR

SECRETARY TELLS OF LAST MOMENTS

Coolidge Stricken as He Prepared To Shave at Northampton Home.

NORTHPHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 5.—Former President Calvin Coolidge apparently was preparing to shave when he was stricken with the heart attack that caused his death, his secretary, Harry Ross, said to-night.

His coat was off and he was in his vest and shirt sleeves when Mrs. Coolidge found him on his dressing room floor.

"Mr. Coolidge and I went downtown this morning and returned about 10 o'clock," Ross said. "We sat in the library chatting about nothing in particular. The main topic of conversation was a long trip I made in October near Plymouth, Vt. Mr. Coolidge was a pretty good shot."

"Sometimes after 11 o'clock, Mr. Coolidge went upstairs and I remained in the library reading. Mrs. Coolidge was downtown on a shopping trip in the company of a friend, Mrs. R. B. Hill of Haydenville. She returned to the house but I did not see her come in. At 12:15 she called to me from upstairs. The ex-president was dead. I don't recall her exact words."

The last person to see the former president alive is believed to have been Robert S. Smith, caretaker at The Beeches.

According to Smith, Mr. Coolidge walked down into the cellar about 11:50.

"I was in the cellar taking care of the furnace when Mr. Coolidge appeared," Smith said. "I heard a bit of walking up and down the house and there was nothing unusual in his visit to the cellar. I don't think we exchanged a single word, unless he possibly said 'hello.' That was the last time I saw him."

The only persons in the house, other than Mrs. Coolidge and the other household servants, were the cook, Mrs. Bessie Bryson, and the maid, Lillian Nelligan.

Guards were placed about the house to bar intruders but there was a steady stream of messengers arriving with telegrams of condolence.

Work Was Completed, Coolidge Told Friend

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Calvin Coolidge felt that his work was done.

Less than a week ago, on December 31, he wrote a letter from Northampton to one of his secretaries in Washington, Edward T. Clark, his secretary for eight years, which included his stay in the White House, saying:

"No one can tell these days what any short time will bring, but of course I know that my work is done."

"That wasn't a premonition," Clark said today as he told about the letter. "It was just a statement of fact. He had worked hard, finished his work, and was getting ready for a rest."

Birthplace Dazed By News of Death

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Jan. 5.—(AP)—A man hurried down a country lane today bearing to the occupants of the seven dwellings that make up the small Vermont town.

Calvin Coolidge had died.

Allen Brown hurried to the home, where Colonel John Coolidge administered the oath of president to his son, drew back. Tears filled her eyes. She thanked Allen and closed the door.

Brown then went to tell Lynn Cady, who has charge of the news over a bit. Brown repeating all she had been telephoned to him from the state capital at Montpelier.

"Sometimes after 11 o'clock, Mr. Coolidge went upstairs and I remained in the library reading. Mrs. Coolidge was downtown on a shopping trip in the company of a friend, Mrs. R. B. Hill of Haydenville. She returned to the house but I did not see her come in. At 12:15 she called to me from upstairs. The ex-president was dead. I don't recall her exact words."

Mrs. Coolidge, among the first to call upon President Hoover and Alfred E. Smith.

Wanted Rest.

In a magazine article, published after his retirement, Mr. Coolidge declared he wanted to retire for several reasons, which he proceeded to explain.

First of all, there was his own health and that of Mrs. Coolidge.

"It is hazardous," he wrote, "to attempt what we feel is beyond our strength."

In addition, he considered it impossible for one man to serve successfully in the presidency for more than eight years as a review of the careers of those who had served two full terms had shown him that the latter part of their tenure of office was marked by a series of constructive accomplishments.

Another major Coolidge policy was that of reduction of the high tax schedules that came with him.

It was interpreted variously throughout the country. Many saw it as a sincere wish for economy, but still a willingness to accept the nomination arose. Others looked upon it as a fiscal steer, to occupy the moderate house where he started life in 1905, when Mr. Coolidge commenced his public career as city solicitor of that municipality.

As early as the spring of 1927, he had indicated his desire not to be re-elected. By his own confession, this view was shared by Mr. Coolidge himself, regardless of the popular tradition that a president must retire after his second term.

Milestones in Life Of Calvin Coolidge

BORN July 4, 1872, at Plymouth, Vt. Received preliminary education in ungraded school at Plymouth and at Black River Academy at Ludlow and St. Johnsbury Academy.

Was graduated at Amherst College in 1895. In senior year won gold medal in national competition for best essay on causes of the Revolutionary War.

Studied law in offices of Hammond & Field at Northampton, Mass., and began practice there.

Entered politics as member of Northampton common council, 1900-1901.

City clerk of Northampton, 1904.

Married Grace A. Goodhue, of Burlington, Vt., October 4, 1905.

Member Massachusetts house of representatives, 1907-1908.

Lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, 1914-1915.

Elected governor of Massachusetts, two terms, 1919 and 1920.

Elected vice president of the United States in November, 1920.

Became president of the United States August 3, 1923, upon the death of Warren G. Harding.

Elected president of the United States in November, 1924.

While on vacation August 2, 1927, issued famous statement, "I do not choose to run for president in 1928."

Retired from presidency March 4, 1929, and resumed residence at Northampton, Mass.

Died at his home in Northampton January 5, 1933.

city clerk, but declined a nomination to succeed himself.

A year after his marriage he was elected to the Massachusetts house of representatives and near the end of his second term was elected mayor of Northampton, a position he held until he was back on "Bacon Hill" as a senator, to which office he was re-elected. It often has been said that Mr. Coolidge's public career was shaped by a series of "political accidents" and because of them he became referred to as "lucky Cal."

One of these so-called accidents occurred near the end of his second term as senator. Levi H. Greenwood, who had been president of the senate, had been called to that office by the death of a president. He alone of all the vice presidents had sat in the cabinet meetings, where he obtained first-hand information as to the varied affairs of the nation, which had prompted President Harding in his decision on major problems, domestic and foreign.

It was not surprising therefore, that he put his hand to the helm of the ship of state with a sureness and coolness that impressed both with whom he was in contact. His first major determination was to carry out the policies inaugurated by Mr. Harding and, in the accomplishment of that task, to retain about him the advisors who had assisted Mr. Harding in shaping those policies.

While this program was re-assigned to the leaders of his party, to most of them he still was an unknown quantity. "Silent Cal" he was called. So the leaders came to see him in a steady stream, ostensibly to take their respects, but in reality with the hope of learning what manner of man it was who had sprung over night to the titular leadership of their party.

What the president said to them remained a closed book, but signs were not lacking that he could easily break through his cloak of reticence.

The merit of the controversy as to whether the governor received much of the credit due to Edwin C. Curtis, the Boston police commissioner, during the strike through the use of the state guard turned the eyes of the country to the governor of Massachusetts.

It has been said that the conference was not preceded by a sufficient amount of preliminary consideration of technical methods of disarmament, but at any rate, irreconcilable differences of opinion arising from the widely varied needs of the United States and England caused the conference to end in deadlock which continued to the end of the Coolidge administration.

Declined Nomination.

Mr. Coolidge also sought to present peace through the Kellogg multilateral treaty for the renunciation of war which he declared the most important sum to be done by the Senate during his time in the White House.

In spite of determined opposition from a group of senators who regarded the

Unlike many other aspirins, St. Joseph's, in its journey from maker to consumer, is not left free to the deteriorating influences of moisture. Each box of St. Joseph's Aspirin is carefully wrapped in moisture-proof cellulose so that its original purity and full

Coolidge's Path to High Honor Traced From Humble Farm

By the Associated Press.

Born and reared in the humble surroundings of a Vermont farm, Calvin Coolidge was destined to go by successive steps to the highest and greatest office in a government to which he often referred as "the nation's capital." He served for six years and to terminate his presidential career virtually of his own volition.

To the vice presidency and to the presidency he brought a shrewd common sense, a quiet personality in vivid contrast with some of his predecessors, and a keen sense of humor and many hobbies and dislikes retained from his New England boyhood.

Among his supporters he inspired an ardent admiration and from his political opponents he often received the bitterness of denunciations. But there were nevertheless many other qualities which gained him friends and which liked to smoke a cigar with him and talk things over.

Reaching the presidency upon the death of Warren G. Harding in 1923, Mr. Coolidge was confronted with problems of rehabilitation arising from the World War and the depression of 1921, and almost at once the country was shaken by the scandals which were revealed in the naval oil leases.

With serenity and calmness he rode out these storms and meanwhile instituted a policy of government economy and material help to the returning veterans. Such was the success of this program that when he ran for president in 1924 he was returned to office by a popular plurality of 1,000,000, the greatest that had ever been accorded him up to that time.

The manner of his leaving the presidency aroused a national interest comparable with that of his induction into office by his father in 1923.

As early as the spring of 1927, he had indicated his desire not to be re-elected. By his own confession, this view was shared by Mr. Coolidge himself, regardless of the popular tradition that a president must retire after his second term.

He had no desire to run for president again, he said, but he had no desire to leave the White House.

BARUCH TO CALL RAILROAD GROUP

Will Complete Work in Spirit Coolidge Began
Three Months Ago.

NEW YORK. Jan. 5.—(AP)—Its work nearing completion, the national transportation committee, headed by Calvin Coolidge will "carry on," Bernard M. Baruch said tonight, "in the spirit in which he led it."

All that remains in the preparation of a report on the committee's survey of the country's transportation problems, which will be done, Vice Chairman Baruch said, "in a manner which we all hope and believe would have his full approval."

When the committee was formed, Walter H. Bennett, president of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, a member of the committee, said it raised approximately $19,000,000 in railroad bonds were in jeopardy. Declaring many of these bonds were held by schools, churches, savings banks and insurance companies as well as individuals, Bennett said emergency measures would be required to safeguard the investments.

Describing Mr. Coolidge's death as "a shock to the country," Baruch said "it comes with peculiar poignancy to me, especially on account of our recent close association with him in the national transportation committee, to which he gave a full measure of his great ability and his usual devotion to all public duty."

"Although all who were associated in this work," he continued, "had had occasional contact with him and knew of his remarkable qualities of mind and heart, this recent much closer association gave us an insight into a side of his character with which I think the public was not altogether familiar. His care of the more homely and personal associations was of a richness and depth that was not generally realized."

The committee has completed its hearings and is approaching the end of the program laid out by him. It will carry on to a conclusion in the spirit in which he led it and in a manner which we all hope and believe would have his full approval."

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, Clark Howell Sr., publisher of The Atlanta Constitution, and Alexander Loeger, president of the International Harvester Company, are other members of the committee.

At the organization meeting on October 7, Mr. Coolidge outlined the purpose of the committee as follows: "While primarily we are interested in the railroad and consideration of the great problem will involve all the methods of transportation by water and air and motor. While, of course, we cannot tell how long the investigation will last, it will be our purpose to finish it within three months."

The last hearings attended by Mr. Coolidge were held on December 7, 8 and 9. The next hearing was scheduled for January 11, following which a report was to be drafted for submission to the group of savings banks, insurance companies, universities and other interests which sponsored the survey. The members received no compensation.

John W. Power, the secretary, said Baruch, who automatically succeeds Mr. Coolidge as chairman, probably would call the committee together again next week.

By FRANK H. McCONNELL.

NEW YORK. Jan. 5.—(P)—Wall Street was stunned today by the sudden death of former President Calvin Coolidge.

Probably more than any other man, Mr. Coolidge was a symbol in the financial district. In private life, or in the nation's chief magistracy, he never failed to gain an attentive and sympathetic ear.

The general sense of prosperity which came with the former president's administration became popularly known in Wall Street as the "Coolidge prosperity" and the rising prices of the stock market came to be known as the "Coolidge market."

His death, most Wall Street leaders agreed, was a blow to the stock market.

But in his loss they recognized an event which would not be measured by dollars or cents, but in terms of national sorrow. He was likened by Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City Bank of New York, to a "storm anchor in the treacherous seas of the depression."

It was expected that past custom would be followed in the present instance.

DEATH TAKES COOLIDGE FROM BAY STATE HOME

about nothing in particular. The main topic of conversation was a hunting trip we made in October near Plymouth. Mr. Coolidge was a pretty good shot.

"Sometimes after 11 o'clock, Mr. Coolidge went upstairs and I remained in the library reading. . . . Mrs. Coolidge went to the house and did not see her in. At 12:15 she called to me from upstairs. The president was dead. I don't recall her exact words."

The last person to see Mr. Coolidge alive was believed to have been Robert S. Nuttall, a bookseller, who saw him about 1:50 o'clock.

"I was in the cellar taking care of the furnace when Mr. Coolidge appeared," said Smith. "He had a habit of walking about the house and there was nothing unusual in his visit to the cellar. I don't think we exchanged a single word unless he possibly said 'Hello!'

Went Early to Work.

Following his daily custom he had gone to the office at 8:30. Seemingly he was in his usual health. He had complained at times for the past two or three weeks of indigestion but he did not care to regard his indisposition seriously.

At the office he attended to his correspondence and read the newspapers and about 10 o'clock he said to Ross: "I guess we'll go back to the house."

Ordinarily he remained at the office until shortly before noon when he returned home for luncheon and an hour's nap before resuming his afternoon's work.

Upon their arrival at the house they conversed for some time. Mrs. Coolidge was preparing to go shopping with a close friend, Mrs. R. B. Hills, and her husband asked if she would like to use the car. She expressed a desire to walk and left the house.

Later Mr. Coolidge noticed a jigsaw puzzle upon which Mrs. Coolidge apparently had been working. It had been a Christmas gift to him but he had not attempted to put it together.

He had been working on it for some time and was about half way through when he was interrupted by his wife.

Both were in a little house which is now the general store at Plymouth. Mr. Coolidge had made this city his home since his graduation from Amherst College in 1895.

Life Unaffected.

His rise from the political obscurity of a member of the common council to the position of president of the most exalted office within the gift of a great nation made little or no difference to his private life.

Throughout his long service as a Massachusetts representative and senator, his subsequent election to the lieutenant governorship and finally to the chief magistracy of the commonwealth, he continued to live in one-half of an unpretentious duplex house on an ordinary street.

It was, in fact, only after he had quit the presidency that he permitted himself to depart from the Spartan frugality of his life which had characterized him for nearly a century.

He bought the Beeches, a spacious homestead overlooking the Connecticut valley and fitted it out in keeping with the stately park in which it stood.

Retirement from the presidency brought few changes to Mr. Coolidge's mode of life. While, with the exception of two addresses delivered on behalf of Mr. Hoover in the recent campaign he eschewed direct politics, he did write numerous magazine articles on political and social and legal subjects.

In 1930 he syndicated a daily newspaper column of comment on matters of general interest.

In his early years as a lawyer he entered into partnership with Ralph W. Hemphill, a partner whom Mr. Coolidge's disease delayed after he became president. But the name remained on the door and when, in 1929, Mr. Coolidge returned from Washington he resumed his seat at the same desk and paid his daily visits to the office.

Used Office.

He did not resume the practice of law but utilized the office to facilitate disposition of an immense correspondence which daily reached him.

Each morning he would go to the office where he remained until nearly noon. Then he would return for luncheon and a nap until 2 p.m. when he would go back to the office to work until 4 or 5 p.m.

In the days when he lived in the rented house at Westmoreland he usually walked to and from his office but since he moved to the Beeches he had been driven in his automobile. He took little part in the social life of the city and his evenings were usually spent at home, reading. He was a man who liked to live in quiet.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were members of the Edwards Congregational church, where the funeral will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. He attended services there regularly and occupied the same pew from week to week.

Loved Plymouth Home.

He was quick to leave the church at the end of the Sunday service and strangers often were amazed at the speed with which he alighted from his automobile and into his waiting automobile as soon as the congregation started from its seats. It was done to avoid the inevitable handshaking to which he was subjected if he failed to respond, although when he was half an hour away in his greeting.

Outside of Northampton his private interests seemed centered largely in the little farm at Plymouth. Where by the light of an oil lamp his father administered the presidential oath of office to him a few hours ago, he was buried yesterday.

He spent much time at Plymouth last summer and supervised extensive repairs upon the old homestead. He found relief there from the hay fever which afflicted him in the summer and seemingly enjoyed the peace and contentment of the Vermont hills where he played as a boy. He remained there unusually late last fall and returned to Northampton but a short time before the election.

Official Cognizance Of Death at Capital

WASHINGTON. Jan. 5.—(AP)—

President Hoover formally notified congress of the death of former President Calvin Coolidge this afternoon, in a special message which praised the deceased as having spent a lifetime of "devotion to our country."

The text follows:

"It is my painful duty to inform you of the death today of Calvin Coolidge, former president of the United States."

"There is no occasion for me to recount his eminent services to our country or to members of the senate and house, many of whom were so long associated with him. His entire life has been one of single devotion to our country and his has been a high contribution to the welfare of his kind."

Representative Bertrand H. Snell,

of New York, presented a basket of potatoes. To an elderly negro he commented that there were a lot of black specks

on them and suggested that they be cleaned off.

"Please do," Mr. Coolidge said as he walked by, climbed in the waiting machine and rode away. The sponsor of that story says the president chucked for blocks.

From the Black Hills comes another of the drolleries. Mr. Coolidge was presented with a bushel of potatoes.

To an elderly negro he commented that there were a lot of black specks

on them and suggested that they be

cleaned off.

To the protest of the negro he explained that Vermont potatoes didn't have those black eyes and they should come off.

Willing to please the president at any cost, the impressed negro started rubbing and after watching him for a minute Mr. Coolidge strolled away smiling.

Another:

Mr. Coolidge was trapshooting in the Shenandoah valley. Colonel E. W.

Starling, of the secret service, was one of the great constructors of secretaries of this country and one more needed to shoot during the present economic emergency than ever before.

"All of our sympathy goes out to

Mrs. Coolidge because of the breaking up of this happy family life which we all have so greatly admired. To the people of the United States the sudden passing of this great character is pitifully, and a very great misfortune."

Headquarters of the fourth corps

area at Fort McPherson Thursday night was advised officially by the war department of the death of former President Coolidge and reported to carry out the arrangements for the funeral.

At reveille today 13 guns will be fired and beginning an hour after reveille a single gun will be fired each half hour until retreat. Immediately after retreat a salute to the Union of 48 guns will be fired. In addition

all troops at the post will be paraded

at 10 a.m.

In addition the regular 30-day period of mourning will be observed

during which all flags will fly at half

staff, regimental colors will be draped

in mourning and all officers will wear

the badge of mourning on their coats

and on their sabers.

Coolidge and Roosevelt Both Died Unexpectedly

NEW YORK. Jan. 5.—(AP)—The sudden death of former President Calvin Coolidge today at his Northampton, Mass., home, lacked one day of being 34 years after the death of one of his predecessors in the presidency—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

The death of former President Roosevelt also was sudden. It occurred January 12, 1919, at Oyster Bay, N. Y., and although Colonel Roosevelt had been ill for two months of rheumatism, his passing in his sleep in the early morning took by surprise his physician as well as others who were with him.

In former President Roosevelt's case, death was attributed to a clot of blood which detached itself from a vein and entered the lungs.

ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 6, 1933.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

In the sudden death of Calvin Coolidge the United States loses one of its outstanding and most useful citizens, and one who will be mourned by all Americans, of whatever political faith, as a man peculiarly exemplifying the highest ideals of leadership.

There was no interruption of his service and sage advice to his country when he relinquished the presidency. In his calm and unemotional way he had continued in his co-operation with efforts looking to the betterment of business and the welfare of the people.

Although not a man of the dynamic personality characteristic of most of his predecessors in the White House, he will go down in history as a great president. Possessing to an unusual degree the almost stoical calm of his New England forbears, President Coolidge was a deep thinker and his decisions were guided by breadth of vision characteristic of the man.

Calvin Coolidge, during his tenure as president, met with probably as little criticism as any other chief executive in the history of the country. Although lacking the commanding presence of a Washington, the hammer-and-tongs tenacity of a Roosevelt or the erudition of a Wilson, the people of the country soon came to know that his taciturnity clothed a keen mentality and a soundness and sureness of judgment.

Few men in American public life have had the same uncanny ability to delve to the basic foundation of problems needing solution, or the capacity to give wise counsel in matters of state. The basis of this ability to grasp and interpret lay largely in his calm consideration and thorough dissection of any problem brought before him.

The United States was fortunate in having such an analytical mind at the head of its affairs during the uncertain and changing conditions which existed during his occupancy of the White House.

Mr. Coolidge, always an indefatigable worker, died in harness. As the head of the national transportation committee he was seeking, with those associated with him, to find a constructive way in which the federal government could assist the railroads of the country to rehabilitate themselves and to thus bring relief to the millions of holders of rail securities throughout the country, and by the solution of this problem to benefit business generally.

He was a unique figure in the annals of American public life, enjoying the confidence of the public in his sincerity and uprightness of character to a degree given to but few men.

His death removes one of the ablest and most soundly constructive of the nation's leaders.

MA MARCHES ON!

No incident more revealing of the mysteries and uncertainties, from the occidental viewpoint, of oriental developments is to be had than the "off again, on again, gone again" Finnegans' escapade of the ubiquitous General Ma.

A year ago this valiant Chinese leader was giving the Japanese all sorts of trouble in the Nonni river section of Manchuria. Months later he bobbed up as one of the chief government. But he could not "stay put," and was before long again on the side of the Chinese.

A month or so later Tokyo announced his death in battle, and to prove the story exhibited, from the rooftops, so to speak, his regalia of war. Which was supposed to be the last of General Ma until the soviet government announced that he was the commander of the Chinese troops recently driven across the Siberian border and there interned by the Russians.

Now, say the Japanese, it cannot be General Ma, but only a former bodyguard of Sun Yat-Sen, masquerading under the name of the exterminated Ma! Furthermore, the Japanese allege, the impostor is not even a Chinese, being in reality a former Canadian wrestler by the name of Cohen!

Whatever the facts are, it is certain that the general, either in body or spirit, is still marching on, and the occidental world is again given opportunity to pensively scratch its collective head over the marvels of things oriental.

DWINDLING RAIL REVENUES.

A total loss of nearly a billion dollars in business was suffered by the railroads of the United States during the 10 months ending October 31, as against the same period of the previous year, according to figures announced by the bureau of railway economics at Washington.

And all India knows that, given similar circumstances, similar pogroms will continue to follow. How far for has been seen, and finally disappear, whether by a slackening of religious passion before a great interest in material progress or not, cannot be known.

Spirit of Adventure.

In any collection of misguided jerminds the latest reported utterance of the bishop of London deserves a place. "The spirit of adventure is dying out today," he said. "Young men would rather go into the British Empire to seek fortune. There is not the spirit of the old adventurers."

The scope of adventure is limited these days. The world has become a little crowded. Most parts even of the British Empire prefer to keep their surviving open spaces exclusively for the exercise of adventure by their own citizens. If any youth were to approach almost any country with a view to doing a little capital-founding it would be found that the immigration authorities and the local ministry of labor would have something to say.

Not a dramatic business, perhaps, until he had succeeded in preserving his self-respect and to keep from bittermorn in such circumstances needs as much courage in its way as the old adventurers had in theirs.

The public is certain to travel by the most economical method of transportation, whether by rail, bus, steamship or airplane, and business houses will follow the same principle in shipping their merchandise.

If the rail lines bring their rates, both for passenger and freight transportation, down to those of their competitors in other lines, they will get back their lost business—and not before. They now offer such reduced rates as seasonal allumments to increase travel and make money from them. They must institute the same rates for all the year-around travel if passengers and freight are to again fill their trains.

This does not mean that national, state and local governments should not take proper steps to relieve the railroads of the present discriminatory regulations and to protect them from unjust and untaxed competition.

Both readjustments must be undertaken if the railroads are to again reach that basis of prosperous operation that will reinstate the value of the billions of securities held by millions of Americans and assure the continued payment of railroad taxes upon which so many local governments in the country are dependent to avoid the threat of bankruptcy.

How simple life was before we learned that word "billion."

It doesn't take brains to make money. Look how much jack the easy marks collect for swindlers.

America should be proud of its political tolerance, anyway. No people could tolerate more.

The higher-ups in the racket business just seem high because they are above the law.

Another useless department Mr. Hoover might as well junk is the one that handled his publicity.

New York bankers force the city to cut expenses. They won't trust any insolvent concern unless it makes matches.

Tariff: A wicked tax on imports that should be removed from everything except articles that compete with you.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

The Tale

The tale of revenge and random slaughter over the death of a cow in India is a horrible one, though perhaps no more horrible than many other deeds of the kind elsewhere. Slaughter is slaughter wherever it is and whatever the local term for it. But the incident should help to understand India's communal problem better by recovering for a world which is infinitely remote from ours.

Religious killing has lately been litigated in the west. The case for could not survive unless our more civilized political interests are not destroyed.

But these Sikhs who ran amuck in a Punjab village shooting down their Moslem neighbors were by no means doubt inspired by the authentic spirit of a "holy war." The Moslems had stolen and killed one of their cows. The further inference that the cow, having been killed, would also be eaten is not far-fetched.

Then, remembering past wrongs—the Moslem refusal to close down the cow slaughter houses (on which Moslem livelihood depended)—and with the example before them of the cow that had been held responsible for Moslem skins the sanctity of the cow even at the cost of his own life, the rest followed, the pogrom followed.

And all India knows that, given similar circumstances, similar pogroms will continue to follow. How far for has been seen, and finally disappear, whether by a slackening of religious passion before a great interest in material progress or not, cannot be known.

It is the effect on the victim that makes an act wrong, and that effect must be the standard by which to judge the morality of the act.

Since the goodness of intentions cannot lessen the hurt of the victim, they do not lessen the wrongness of the act that hurt him.

If a clerk steals from your cash drawer, is his act less culpable because his original intention was to borrow the money and return it promptly?

If a man asks you to indorse a note and then fails to pay it, do you hold him blameless because he at first intended to protect you from loss?

Consider, then, the business of credit buying and of borrowing.

If people habitually live beyond their means, are they innocent of wrong if they save the tricks of commerce with the assurance that they will pay the man if ever he is paid?

If acquaintances borrow money, books, clothing, music or tools, is their honesty to remain unquestioned because they originally intended to return these articles?

What difference does it make to the loser whether his goods were borrowed, bought or stolen? In any case he is loser, and someone gained the amount of his loss.

Does the difference between verbs make the difference between right and wrong? Changing the name of the process doesn't alter the fact that a man deprived of his life is dead.

Gentle Methods of Tax Collection Don't Make a One-Dollar Tax Cost Less

By Robert Quillen

The difference between murder and manslaughter may appear only in killer's intention.

Suppose he is driving a car and observes some enemy standing in the street, caught in the midst of traffic. Suppose, further, that he turns the steering wheel so that the car swerves and the enemy is struck down and killed.

Is it murder or manslaughter? None but the killer can know. If he struck his enemy intentionally, even in momentary "malice aforethought," he is a murderer; if he was innocent of evil intent, and moved the wheel thoughtlessly and without design, he is at most guilty of manslaughter.

But in any case the victim is dead, and the lack of evil intent does not relieve the killer of blame. Good intentions cannot relieve the guilt of criminal carelessness. The measure of a wrong is its result, not its motive.

It is the effect on the victim that makes an act wrong, and that effect must be the standard by which to judge the morality of the act.

Since the goodness of intentions cannot lessen the hurt of the victim, they do not lessen the wrongness of the act that hurt him.

If a clerk steals from your cash drawer, is his act less culpable because his original intention was to borrow the money and return it promptly?

If a man asks you to indorse a note and then fails to pay it, do you hold him blameless because he at first intended to protect you from loss?

CHINESE DEMAND JAP WITHDRAWAL

Military and Civilian Dead in Shanghai Estimated at 2,400.

By the Associated Press.

China has demanded that Japan withdraw its troops from Shanghai, punish the officers who attacked that city, and see to it that there is no recurrence of such an incident.

The new attack inspired the Canton government, usually in opposition to the Nanking authorities, to pledge its support to the nationalist regime in whatever course may be necessary to protect the nation "from the invader."

Shanghai, under the domination of Japanese troops, was quiet, with the opposing armies facing each other across the river Lwan, a mile to the south.

Authoritative estimates placed the military casualties in the Shanghai fighting at 1,200 Chinese killed and 1,200 wounded. Chinese civilian deaths were estimated at between 1,200 and 1,500. The Japanese said they lost 18 men killed and 98 wounded.

In Washington, the Japanese ambassador talked for half an hour with Secretary of State Stimson, explaining his country's case. He said later that Japan has no desire to seize any Chinese territory south of the Great Wall, and that the Japanese authorities are doing everything they can to localize the Shanghai situation.

SHANGHAIAN EVACUATION IS DEMANDED BY NANKING

NANKING, China, Jan. 5.—(UPI) — That suit of Paramount against Marlene Dietrich did the trick. The beauty walked into the office of the producer and announced that she'd changed her mind and would go to work.

Frederic March, Rouben Mamoulian and Alfred Hitchcock were still the best combination, that Marlene had ever had. And the lady is fearful of her future in the hands of any director but Von Sternberg, it would seem. She has the best nose for a look, and what she does is to make him look like a picture.

Later in the morning Marlene Dietrich appeared at the Brown Derby with her attorney, Ralph Blum, and immediately began a heated argument. The two had been separated for a week, and the reason of the break-up was that she was not sparkling as is most of his work, but sufficiently gay and above the conventional Hollywood dialog level.

Claudette Colbert, after registering chagrin in the picture, suddenly became a decided fan of "Sign of the Cross" when every critic heralded her superlative sex-appeal, hailing her as the most gay and capable of the girls in the picture.

Alison Skipworth, as the duchess of Hertford, shamed the princeling in the picture, and Stuart Holmes' direction calls for a bit of enthusiastic comment. Gay music runs through the piece, gay wine bubbles in the glasses, the principals are young and lovely and capable, and the evening is short by reason of these things.

ALL CLASSES LAUD CALVIN COOLIDGE

Death Brings Words of Grief and Tribute From All Parties and Creeds.

By the Associated Press.

The world's great men wrote an epitaph of accolade for Calvin Coolidge in a great outpouring of sorrowful expressions at his passing.

President Roosevelt, members of Congress, heads of foreign nations and their ambassadors, educators, ministers, heads of great industrial and business enterprises, all attested by their words to the esteem in which the former president was held.

John W. Davis, who opposed Coolidge for the presidency in 1924: "Those who differed from him politically never questioned his integrity, patriotism or devotion to public duty; and friends and foes alike must regret that the country is deprived of his conduct of the public business."

Charles G. Dawes, vice president under Coolidge: "The loss is irreparable."

Vice President Curtis: "The nation has lost one of its strongest men—a man who was liked and whose abilities were appreciated by the peoples of all the civilized world."

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith: "I had a strong admiration for him. I am deeply shocked and deeply grieved to hear of his death."

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University: "He is a man to whom public service or to attempt to pass final judgment upon his place in the history of our government. There can, however, be no difference of opinion as to his great capacity as an administrator of public business or as an exceptionally representative interpreter of the thoughts and feelings of him whom we call the average man."

James A. Farley, chairman of the democratic national committee: "I am greatly shocked to learn of the death of former Senator Coolidge. He was a great and distinguished American,rendering great services as president of the United States. He will live long in the history of America. Together with my fellow citizens I mourn his loss."

James A. Reed, former United States senator from Missouri: "A personal friend of Mr. Coolidge. He was a fine type of American citizen and is a great national loss."

Secretary Adams, of the navy, a native of the Coolidge's adopted state, said: "Macachusetts is heartbroken over the loss. The country has suffered an irreparable loss." To him "Calvin Coolidge represented a character of the highest degree."

Loss of a "great statesman who devoted his life to the public service" was mourned by Secretary Miller, of the treasury, and Secretary Danaher, of the labor department, predicted "the country will miss him from the councils of those who meet to give consideration to the needs of the state and its people."

Chairman of the committee, of the commerce department, said Mr. Coolidge "united sturdy forcefulness and simple candor—unaffected modesty and rugged forthrightness—a clearness of vision and outstanding purity of purpose."

Secretary Stimson, of the state department, described Mr. Coolidge as "a man of great and commanding chief" and said "his leadership in bringing the finances of the federal government, after the war period of necessarily lavish expenditure and inflation, back to a status of governmental economy and reduction of debts and taxes, was one of the most important services ever rendered to this nation."

Senator George, Georgia: "In this present unhappy condition of affairs at home and abroad, his death will be universally deplored."

ADAMS STRESSES LIVE STOCK VALUE

URGES PROGRAM TO MAKE STATE SELF-SUSTAINING IN TALK TO BANKERS.

To make Georgia self-sustaining by replacing the normal quota of live stock on every farm was advocated by G. C. Adams, commissioner of agriculture, in an address Thursday at the Ansley hotel before the joint meeting of the executive councils of the Georgia Bankers' Association and the Country Bankers' Association of Georgia.

Mr. Adams emphasized the fact that the financial stringency of recent years has caused the majority of farmers to deplete their herds and flocks, leaving these farmers without means of replacing their herds and flocks. With hogs selling at $2.00, and with milk cows known to have changed hands at as little as $5 a head, Mr. Adams represented to the bankers that it is possible to secure a great many animals for restocking the Georgia farms with exceptionally small capital investment. He professed the belief that Georgians will never again see the day when Georgia farms may be restocked when Georgia

R.F.C. LOAN SUGGESTED FOR COAST-GULF CANAL

Georgia Group May Seek Fund To Dig Waterway, St. Marys to St. Marks.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 5.—(P) The Savannah Morning News say the possibility that the Atlantic coast to Gulf of Mexico canal commission, a state organization, may apply to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a loan to finance a canal from the Georgia coast on the Atlantic to the Florida coast on the gulf developed at the meeting of the commission here today.

Although nothing was announced officially, it is reported that the commissioners discussed the matter. The entire matter rests upon the decision of the United States engineers as to which of the six proposed routes is the best for the proposed canal, which would connect the inland waterways of the country. If the engineers decide that the proposed route from St. Marys, Ga., and St. Marks, Fla., is the most practical route from both engineering and economic standpoints, it is expected that the commission then will proceed with the formation of a corporation and application for a loan from the R. F. C. to build the canal. Present estimate of the cost of the canal vary around $300,000,000. The proposed route is 226 miles in length, with 128 miles of the route already available and 100 miles to be completed.

T. Guy Woodford, of Atlanta, chairman of the commission, presided at the meeting, which was attended by Mrs. S. C. Townsend, of St. Marys, secretary, and other members. Colonel E. George Butler, of Savannah, was elected a member, also treasurers, W. E. Coffin, of Atlanta; T. G. P. of Waycross; Major Horner and Major-elect Gamble, of Savannah; Robert W. Groves, chairman of port authority; Henry Blun, banker; Port Pierpont, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Henry Hulliman; Judge Gordon Sherry; Major Howell Garrison, United States district engineer; H. V. Jenkins, president of the Savannah Morning News and Evening Press; Colonel Fred Alstaetter, retired army engineer, and others, attended the meeting. M. O. Dunnigan, of Waycross, also was present. Hon. E. Coffin, another member, was out of the city on business, but sent his regrets that he was unable to be present.

S. C. DUNLAP ELECTED GAINESVILLE MANAGER

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 5.—(P) Samuel C. Dunlap, who has been elected city manager since 1933, Mr. Dunlap who for some time has been president of the Gainesville National bank, has previously served the city as alderman under the old form of government and also as commissioner and mayor under the commission form. He also has directed the affairs of Gainesville's first major to set aside a sinking fund for the retirement of the bonded indebtedness. Mr. Dunlap has announced that he will shortly appoint city employees to serve during the year.

George W. Moore, who is entering upon his second term as commissioner, has been re-elected mayor for a period of two years.

Owen A. McDermed, who has held the position of mayor for the past two years, continues as city commissioner for one year.

Edwin Dozier was re-elected city secretary and W. P. Whelchell will continue to serve as city recorder.

FARMER CELEBRATES HIS 87TH BIRTHDAY

DEWYROSE, Ga., Jan. 5.—(P) The Thornton farmer whose wife is 97 years old on January 4, His sons and their wives met with him for a spend-the-day party with noon lunch.

Mr. Thornton was born in the Colquitt water community of Elbert county on January 4, 1846. He lived in the same home till he married in 1865 and moved one mile to his present home, where he has lived for 68 years.

Before he was 16 he volunteered for service in the Confederate army and for three years fought in Virginia and Maryland.

Left at the close of the war with nothing but his black Canadian army mare, he began farming on the farm of his mother-in-law. The year 1866 was a hard one, but he survived. He produced only 900 pounds of seed cotton and 12 bushels of corn.

Without buying anything the next year (there being nothing for sale if he had had money), by cutting grass from swamps and other means, he managed to make a crop. From this beginning he began to prosper till at one time he owned nearly 2,000 acres of valuable land and other property.

I would feel like a dead thing most all of the time and frequently I had dull headaches.

"When I read about Sargon bringing good health to so many people folks like here at home I began taking the treatment and it wasn't long before I knew I had found the right medicine at last. After taking several bottles my stomach no longer bothers me and my heart is strong again and now sleep like a baby and feel better than I ever did. Doctors Wonder What Happened When Valdostan Reached Corner?

VALDOSTA, Ga., Jan. 5.—(P) Jack Stewart's strange delirium of mysterious cause is the best of medical doctors puzzled.

Monday night he had a date with a girl friend and left her late in the evening to hurry to his work in an express office. He reached there in a daze, didn't recognize anybody and has grown more delirious.

Police, doctors and associates have joined in trying to learn what happened to him en route to the office but have found out nothing thus far.

Scratches on his face and a bruise and acute soreness on his neck have led some to believe he was attacked by robbers. Physicians say he never showed on his neck would have produced temporary mental derangement. Absence of a serious wound led them to advance the theory he might have been struck with a sandbag that only scant marks.

Meanwhile, the youth mutters incomprehensible words of the time. Occasionally he starts a narrative of talk along a principal street of the city and describes his movement in detail until he tells of reaching a designated street corner. Then he always bursts out screaming and tries to fight everybody around him.

TEN THOUSAND TO SEE DEDICATION OF AIRPORT

Georgia News Told in Brief

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 5.—(P) Arrived: Eastern Sword, Charles Somerset, Jacksonville and sailed for Baltimore; Fairfax, Baltimore and sailed for New York.

FITZGERALD, Ga., Jan. 5.—A crowd of more than ten thousand people is anticipated as an audience at one of the greatest events in the history of this city Sunday as the Fitzgerald municipal airport is officially dedicated in connection with the celebration of the founding of the Fitzgerald community.

The twenty planes of many types are expected to perform, including a squadron of 12 army planes and ships piloted by famous aviators now taking part in the races at Miami and other pilots who have expressed their intention to attend.

POOLER, Ga., Jan. 5.—This little city of about 800 souls held a quiet municipal election today. There were 45 registered voters, most of whom cast ballot. The ticket was composed of these democratic nominees: W. M. Boyton for mayor; J. E. Slater for sheriff; and H. Myatt, A. B. Gammon, C. W. Hardy, J. R. Slater and Roscoe Denmark for aldermen.

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 5.—A number of houses have been erected several dwellings in Barnesville this week. Two tenant houses belonging to the William Carter Company burned to the ground Monday night; a house occupied by Mrs. J. S. Stanley was burned the same night, destroying all of her household goods, and the building was a total loss.

MIDVILLE, Ga., Jan. 5.—The program of thrilling stunt flying and interesting aerobatic exercises will begin early in the afternoon and continue until dark. Most of the planes will also make passenger flights.

RAIL WORKERS ASK MOTOR REGULATIONS

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 5.—(P) Requests for legislation placing bus and truck lines under regulations comparable with those applying to railroads have been presented to Chatham county's delegation to the general assembly by railway employees of the same.

Spokesmen for the workers presented the legislators with statistical statements purporting to show the inequality of taxes paid by the railroads as compared with levies on the motor carriers.

Representative Shelly Myrick told the group he and his colleagues would seek regulations for the bus and truck lines that would assess them a fair share of the taxes.

CEDARTOWN COUNCIL ELECTS CITY OFFICERS

CEDARTOWN, Ga., Jan. 5.—The first meeting of the year was held Tuesday night at the Cedartown city hall when all officials were elected and candidates for 1933 were chosen.

The council consists of J. W. Cone, mayor; C. B. Chapman, G. P. Northcutt, J. G. Morton, Gordon Brewster and S. W. Good. Mr. Good was the only new councilman succeeding Joe McWater.

C. B. Chapman was elected mayor pro tem and G. P. Northcutt, treasurer. All other city officials were re-elected. All who are: J. C. Walker, clerk, who begins his thirty-third year; E. S. Ault, attorney; Dr. S. L. Whitley, physician; W. W. Crawford; recorder; S. A. Hunt, engineer; and Paul Grimes, street foreman.

The following were chosen for the post of mayor from over 100 applications: J. Grady Cobb, chief; J. P. Watson, J. F. Bolling, Howell Clift, W. J. Isbell and J. E. Duke. Watson and Bolling were the only police officers re-elected.

WASHINGTON TO ELECT CITY FATHERS MONDAY

WASHINGTON, Ga., Jan. 5.—For the municipal election on January 9, two have qualified for mayor and eight for councilmen. Mayor L. D. Faver is opposed by W. L. Johnson, who was defeated by Faver two years ago. M. Pembroke Pope, T. W. Cozart, R. A. Chapman and J. D. Ellington are present candidates. All stand for re-election, while W. A. Slaton, M. H. Miller, William Turner and A. A. Marshall are new candidates. R. H. Pharr retires as chairman of the board last year.

The county is reported to be in excellent condition, following a reorganization of business two years ago and the adoption of a new system of handling affairs, under the direction of Harley Langdale, county attorney.

Heaven Bound."

HARTWELL, Ga., Jan. 5.—The presentation of "Heaven Bound" was given tonight at the Hartwell Methodist church by a cast of colored people from the colored Methodist church under the direction of their pastor, Rev. Evans. They expect to present it in other towns to raise money to pay off an indebtedness on their church.

Reector Resigns.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 5.—G. L. Hiller, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal church here, has resigned to become rector of a church in Miami. Dr. Hiller's successor has not been elected.

Chairman of Board.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 5.—R. G. Davis, member of the Clarke county board of commissioners, has been elected chairman for the current year. He succeeds Dr. Charles M. Strain.

Spalding Cuts Salaries.

GRINNELL, Ga., Jan. 5.—A 10 percent reduction in salaries for school teachers, school bus drivers and numerous other employees of Spalding county has been announced by J. P. Drawbridge Tender at Oconee Raised Span Seven Times in 1932

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 5.—(P) A certain drawbridge tender hereabout has about the softest job anybody ever heard of—he raised the bridge only seven times last year—but it's good to last.

The Seaboard Air Line railroad, which employs him full time on its span across the Oconee river, has petitioned the war department for authority to abolish the job. As an alternative, the railway proposes that river traffic be required to give 36 hours notice of contemplated passage so that a man can be sent there to raise the bridge.

It was pointed out that boat movements on that portion of the Oconee

Thus far, the war department has not given its answer.

Depression Is Blamed For Lower Birth Rate

DAWSON, Ga., Jan. 5.—The depression probably had a large part in lowering the birth and death rate in Dawson during 1932.

According to records in the office of Judge J. W. Holland, who records the vital statistics for the town district of Terrell county, there were only 170 births recorded by this office during the past year as compared with 193 in 1931. Of those recorded during 1932, 27 were white and 145 were colored.

Illinois Man Is Killed By Own Trap for Thieves

WATSEKA, Ill., Jan. 5.—(UPI) Lee Margrey, 60, set a trap for chicken thieves, walked into it and fatally wounded himself.

Margrey lived on a farm near Osgood. Thieves broke into this henhouse several times. He decided to trap them.

He fastened a loaded shotgun in the henhouse, fixed a string so that when anyone opened the door the shotgun would be fired. Then he forgot about the trap, opened the door himself and the full charge from the shotgun tore into his left leg just above the knee.

Physicians amputated his leg, but he died today of shock and hemorrhage.

Imports made by the Atlanta school board took action also included:

1. Voted to defer placing the one-hour additional school day into effect in junior and senior high schools until September school opening. The extra time is designed to shorten time spent in home work preparation, and to give students the advantage of a teaching tool in preparation of less work.

2. Sutton estimated that $2,800,000 is the minimum amount on which schools can be operated for 1933, but said he had prepared no definite figures. The board voted to defer making a final until the allocation for schools is made by the finance committee of council.

3. Voted to ask council to set up $90,000 for free textbooks purchased by the schools in 1932. Frank R. Fling offered a motion by Commissioner S. C. Noland to buy-American.

4. Tabled a Noland motion to abolish all standing committees with the exception of the current expenditures committee.

5. Appointed a Noland resolution establishing a special committee to make recommendations of changes in conduct of the school department at the next session of the Georgia assembly. Baird named the following committee: Mrs. Z. P. Fling, George W. Powell and Ernest J. Brewer.

6. Approved a Noland resolution asking a special committee of three to investigate printing, multiographing and other such work in the department, and asked the current expenditures committee of the board to investigate telephone expense of the department with a view of curtailing it.

7. Gave Harrelson a rising vote of thanks for his services as president of the board in 1932.

8. Tabled a Noland resolution asking a special committee of three to investigate printing, multiographing and other such work in the department, and asked the current expenditures committee of the board to investigate telephone expense of the department with a view of curtailing it.

9. Re-established a special board committee to continue work of providing cafeteria services for all schools and designated Baird as chairman.

10. Asked the board of lady visitors to investigate the feasibility of extending the library facilities of various schools to the parents with a proviso that a nominal charge be made.

11. Elected the following as members of the board of lady visitors while representatives from other wards asked more time to make nominations: Mrs. R. E. Jones, fifth ward; Mrs. John Bell, eighth, and Mrs. James A. Bellflower, thirteenth.

THE BITTER TEA OF GENERAL YEN

By Grace Zaring Stone.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Bob Strike, missioner to China, where opium is禁售 (prohibited), secures passage to Chao-kiang, where opium is禁售 (prohibited) and with his fiance, Megan Davis, sets out to rescue them. Arriving at railroad station, they find their train delayed because Miss Davis was kidnapped, later to find herself in the summer palace of General Yen, Chinese warlord. General Yen had sent Bob Strike and entrusted to a Chinese maid-in-waiting, found their way into the hands of Yen. Yen's wife, General Yen's concubine, Megan found General Yen standing on the balcony outside her window. Her tender concern for her caused her to leave the place, to a soldier, who betrayed her to the enemy. Now GONE.

trembling under the shock of her disillusionment. "I betrayed you, General—without knowing it. I carried that scroll from the captain—to Mah-Li. She left it in room. You making no attempt to dissuade her. She has looked after her, obviously sorry that Megan confessed her part in the trick. He turned to Yen.

"How long do you suppose your army will stay loyal now? With all your money, the communists will buy the scroll. You can good-by to this little empire of yours in about two days' time!"

"What of it, Schulz?" said the young general, untruffled by Schulz's abuse and prediction of disaster. "The conquest of a province or the conquest of a woman—what is the difference?"

General Yen received Megan in his private chambers. He strove to evade the scroll issue, uppermost in both their minds. He began reciting his most sacred hand-me-downs, precious mementos of bygone dynasties. Finally, Megan could stand it no longer.

"Does our bargain include torture?" she asked him, her eyes blazing.

"That's all right," Mah-Li smiled. She wrinkled her brow. "But how can I go to the temple. I'm not allowed to leave the palace."

"Oh, I'm sure you will let me go with you," offered Megan eagerly.

"You wait here—I'll ask him."

Megan not only received Yen's permission but his limousine. The temple was not far away; they reached it in a few minutes.

As they entered the antiquated house of prayer, several poverty-stricken natives slunk away from the altar upon which was the Meditating Buddha. The priest stopped his chanting as Mah-Li and Megan approached the altar. Mah-Li offered the scroll to General Yen, who, in turn, handed the present Captain Li's scroll. He unrolled it to its full length.

"You see," Mah-Li whispered to Megan. "I didn't even read it."

Megan nodded her understanding as the priest began chanting again, his ceremony of appropriate blows on the gong hanging in back of him. Megan Davis had her faith, but even faith cannot change a leopard's spots, for in the rear of that Buddha, behind a screen, four men, three Chinese and one Russian, were listening to Captain Li's prayer intently. One of the Chinese knelt in front of a telegraph key, and transmitted the "prayer" as the priest chanted it.

"What do you mean?"

"If I remember our bargain correctly, you offered your life as a forfeit for Mah-Li's good faith?"

"My life?" asked Megan unconsciously.

"What else did you think I would accept as a forfeit?"

"You can't frighten me that way, General Yen," she said defiantly.

"That's what you understood by the bargain—I'm not running away."

"No—if you misinterpreted our agreement," said Yen, now thoroughly miserable. "I wouldn't want to hold you." Yen was about to go.

Megan was touched by his generosity.

"Schulz will arrange for your departure—while there is yet time. My power is nearing its end. I'm afraid I won't be able to be of much use to you. But Schulz always has a plan."

"Where's Mah-Li?" asked Schulz bluntly.

Megan was alarmed. "Isn't he in her room?"

"No," he retorted grimly, "and she isn't any place else, either."

"What?"

"You'll never see her in this ranch again. She's skipped out—flew the coop."

"Now calm yourself, Schulz," soothed General Yen. "The attack has been repulsed. Everything is all right."

"All right!" answered Schulz shortly.

"Do you realize that half your town is gone—money I've ground out of this province by the sweat of my brain?"

"Too bad, Schulz, but you just have to use your brain a little harder," he snarled.

"Yeah!"

"Perhaps I'm not as smart as you," he said. "I'm coming to your room to kill you—and then I was going to follow you to the Celestial Garden, where there is no General Yen and no Miss Davis. I'm still young and I—"

Megan was in too much agony to bear physical contact with the man. She felt herself falling into space—and she suddenly turned, trembling.

At that instant, the general sank into deep reverie. He saw himself seated on the throne of what was once the powerful seat of the Chinese dynasty. The beautiful white girl had come to him to give him her devotion, not in accordance with her pact, but only to offer him the love of her man.

General Yen was amazed at the philosophy of the white race as there seemed to rise before his eyes on granite stone in letters of blood, the Chinese law:

"East is East and West is West; And never the twain shall meet."

Suddenly Schulz dashed into the room, casting no more than a glance at Megan.

"You'd better do some high-speed thinking, general. It's all up!"

"So soon?" asked Yen calmly.

"Yap! Your army's gone over to the enemy. Even your bodyguard has deserted. The palace is as empty as a looted tomb. You've waited just one day too long."

"I'm glad I did," Yen smiled enigmatically. "Can you tell Miss Davis our secret?"

"I got your car parked outside, and if we get down to the bay, I got a launch hidden under the dock."

They had a hard time persuading Yen to leave, as he protested that without him they would safe, he being the ones they wanted. Finally he yielded. They dashed across the dock in the car, tearing through clusters of soldiers who tried to stop them. At the dock they found that their boat had been stolen. Schulz, however, discovered a sampan tied up to the landing. As they got out of the car, General Yen saw soldiers coming toward them.

"You see, it's no use, Schulz,"

"Don't give up," Megan whispered to him, "don't!"

"Wake up, you loose!" Schulz snarled at a coolie on the sampan's deck.

"Get her away as quick as you can," whispered Yen to Schulz, "and I'll try to hold them off." He drew a revolver on the rapidly advancing men.

"Get in, Miss Davis," Schulz cut the sampan clear just as the soldiers, recognizing Yen on the dock, began to shoot at him.

"Don't leave me!" sobbed Megan hysterically. "Don't leave him!"

"It's no use," answered Schulz reluctantly. "I've got to get you out of here."

And as open water appeared between the dock and the boat, General Yen started across, flinging his revolver aimlessly at the feet of his enemies. His eyes lit up with a smile of happy surrender. General Yen raised his hand to Megan in a kind of ecstasy.

"Go ahead, Megan—I'll wait for you. The soldiers closed in mercilessly."

Deserted by his troops, his money gone, Megan, on her way to her lover, as planned by General Yen, prepared for himself the tea of his ancestors, and from his hand slipped the Chinese family poison. In ingesting, holding the hand of one he loved, the general put the cup to his lips.

East or West, man's passion flames, reckoning of race or creed, but the gods themselves take jealous hand when death loves strays beyond the barriers of blood.

THE END.

That night after Nevada's return, Ben was up late watching the moon, yielding to dreams hopeless of fulfillment. He heard a faint, distant clip-clop of trotting horses on

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The stock market was unable to penetrate the top levels of the December rally today, in an effort to extend the advance of the previous day.

The market closed narrowly irregular after experiencing a very brief flurry of selling. The price average of 90 shares was off 1.5 of a point.

Trading was in fair volume according to recent standards; the turnover was 1,200.

Rails softened a little, when financial news ticklers carried the announcement of the death of former President Calvin Coolidge. The effect of the news was evidently almost momentaneous, nervousness Wall Street has been hopeful that the commission headed by Mr. Coolidge would find a solution for the carrier problem, but the work will go on, presumably under the leadership of Bernard M. Baruch, its view chairman.

Such issues as Union Pacific, Santa Fe, and New Haven lost major fractions, while New York Central and Southern railroads off slightly.

Long Island Lighting Electric and Associated firms spot up a point. United Steel common lost 5.8, while the preferred gained as much. Tobaccos were steady, save for Lorillard, which lost 3-4.

General Motors and Chrysler eased small fractions.

Wall Street watched the commodities closely, and was gratified by a little more firmness in wheat. Bar silver rose 1-2 cent an ounce. Corn and cotton were barely steady at the finish.

Pressure against the dollar in the foreign exchange markets showed signs of subsiding. High grade bonds again advanced, indicating that inflation was not extreme.

Business news of a character to influence the market was meager. Brokerage sentiment remained cautiously bullish. The weekly report of Electric Power production, as well as free trade reports of some of the trunk lines, were distorted by the holidays, and failed to provide clues to the trends of business.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(P)—The bond market continued to advance along a wide path today in response to a well-sustained demand for the prime investment groups and a friendlier regard for many of the semi-speculative descriptions.

Trading was quite active in most classes, sales totaling $12,607,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans advancing four-tenths of a point.

The recovery met no appreciable resistance in its run of talk of possible curtailment of inflation.

Led by Santa Fe issues, the rail division, including the prior liens as well as many of the less well-secured loans, moved to a better plane.

Utility issues moved easily with the exception of a considerable decline in electric power output in the final week of December.

Several of the United States government bonds were subjected to profit-taking, while others edged slightly higher. Foreign loans were uniformly firm with the South Americans showing a marked recovery from their recent heaviness.

Strength of independent steel issues was the outstanding feature of the industrial list. McWane Iron & Steel, Vanadium, Coal, and steel heating Steel 412s were marked up from 4 to 4 points on moderately active buying.

George and Tydings to Press For Economic Council Bill

Coffin's Idea of Resurrection of War Body, Embodied in Bill, Meets Approval in Capital.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Believing that the economic forces of the nation can be rehabilitated only through a concerted program based upon a survey of the country's industrial and business needs, Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, announced today that he will press for consideration at this session of the house introduced this week by himself and Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland, jointly, calling for the establishment of a comprehensive planning agency to implement a plan for economic relief.

The George-Tydings measure proposes the creation of a "council of national stability and welfare," composed of seven cabinet officers, together with an advisory or planning commission made up of nine leading figures in the field of finance, industry, labor, agriculture and economics.

Already the bill has been referred to the finance committee and it is in the purpose of Senator George, one of the ranking democratic members of the body, to ask for hearings without delay.

Elaborates Coffin's Idea.

Anticipating that action on the proposal may be forthcoming this session before the change in administration March 4, the two senators, who collaborated on the project, made provision for having the advisory commission selected by President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt. Authority was given President Hoover to appoint only from a list of persons nominated by Mr. Roosevelt.

The proposed government agency is an elaboration of the idea of Howard E. Coffin, capitalist of Sapelo Island, Georgia, who has sought the services of an old-time mercantile and defense a war-time body, as a means of bringing the country out of the economic depression. Himself a former member of the council, Mr. Coffin several times has urged President Hoover to establish the agency as a peace-time emergency action. The president, however, has frowned on each overture to that end.

As presented by Senator George and Senator Tydings, the bill would apply to the proposed "council of national stability and welfare" practically the same functions of the old council of national defense except that emphasis would be placed on economic problems rather than those arising during the period of war.

Office Without Pay.

The Sapelo Island man has conferred with both senators extensively on the plan. As a leading figure in the business world, it has been his idea that the agency cannot afford to depend on mere expedience to work its way out of the depression but must provide some central planning agency to meet problems as they exist.

All members of the advisory or planning commission would serve without pay, but an appropriation of $250,000 is asked for the expense of investigations incident to the formulation of recommendations.

Almost any subject or problem affecting the national welfare could be taken up by the council and commission, everything it is suggested, from taxes to prohibition. First, the commission would be organized, leading executive clemency.

Carter, a man, shot and killed the sheriff in 1928 while the officer was conducting a raid on a still, said to have been operated by Carter.

Governor Russell Thursday took under advisement the applications for executive clemency made in behalf of M. A. Gay, condemned sinner, and Mrs. J. H. Malone, disbarred lawyer, who is serving a 10-to-20-year sentence for criminal assault on a young woman who went to his office seeking employment. Clemency has been recommended for both by the prison commission.

Senators See Benefits.

As the agency worked out during the war, recommendations presented to the cabinet council by the commission were acted upon immediately without the usual delays incident to official functions. The president's cabinet would consider a report at a meeting after the recommendations from the commission were received and the matter referred to congress for action forthwith, where legislative authority was needed to put the recommendations into effect.

Both Senator George and Senator Tydings, along with Mr. Coffin, have expressed the belief that without some central planning and a concerted program the nation cannot hope to see a restoration of normal business dealings within the near future.

If, by chance, the measure should not be passed this session it is the plan of the two senators to bring it forward in the next session, urging it as an important part of the Roosevelt administration's reconstruction program.

HOUSE MAY POSTPONE RAILROAD LEGISLATION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The prospect that little important railroad legislation would go through the house in the next few days, if not day as a majority of the house commerce committee agreed it would be futile to press controversial measures in the few remaining weeks.

DYR'S MAP PROGRAM FOR MACON MEETING

Drive Planned To Organize Units in Every City in State.

Plans for a state-wide prohibition movement in Macon, Ga., January 17, at which leaders say they will start a drive to organize units in every city, town and county in Georgia, were considered here Thursday by the executive committee of the consolidated prohibition forces for Georgia.

Dr. C. O. Jones, superintendent of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League, said it is the intention of the committee to have a dry unit in every part of Georgia. He said the afternoon session of the main meeting would be devoted to organization.

The prohibition forces will meet at the Mulberry Street Methodist church, with Dr. Charles A. Burts, Macon, presiding.

Dr. Burts is pastor of the First Baptist church of Macon. He told the executive committee Thursday that he would accept tentatively the presidency of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League, to succeed Dr. Lester Anthony, and would make known his final decision at the rally. Dr. Anthony recently was transferred to a pastorate at San Antonio, Texas.

Dr. Jones said it was planned to have a meeting of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Burts and Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, evangelistic superintendent of the National W. C. T. U., to address the meeting. Other widely known speakers will be present, he said.

Negro Employment Conditions Unchanged, T. A. Hill Declares

"Although there was the usual seasonal pick-up in the employment that marks the Christmas holiday season, there has been little change in the amount of employment or unemployment of negroes throughout the country," is the opinion of Arnold Hill, director of labor relations in the Urban League, who left Atlanta Thursday after a three-day visit.

Recognized as one of the foremost authorities in the country on negro employment and industrial conditions, Director Hill was the guest of honor at a round-table discussion dinner at the Butler Street Y. M. C. A. cafe.

During his stay in Atlanta he visited such agencies as the Unemployment Relief Center, the Community Chest, Family Welfare and others. In addition to holding a number of meetings and interviews, his schedule called for a lecture at Morris Brown University, a speech at Clark University; another address before the students at the Atlanta School of Social Work, a visit to the Booker T. Washington High school and the dinner at the Y at 6 p. m. Thursday's program included a talk on the Central Y. W. C. A. on Auburn avenue at 6 o'clock, lectures throughout the day and a visit to Atlanta University during the day.

Director Hill's visit to Atlanta was the first of a series of stop-overs in various southern cities that will continue the greater part of nine weeks and take him into various parts of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Mississippi, with other trips to include Illinois, Minnesota and Ohio. This is the first time he has been as far south as Atlanta since 1928.

"What there has been a great increase in the amount of unemployment, both for white and colored people, and the last few years have noted the passing of such things as were generally known as 'negro jobs,' there has been a decided increase in the employment of negroes in merchandising phases of the country's life," said the director. He believes some of these jobs formerly relegated to the negro performance of such personal services as table waiting and bell hopping, have been dignified and accepted by white men. He includes in this list such other occupations as garbage collecting and the like. Again, he believes machinery may be blamed for number of these changes in the manneres forcing skilled labor to become unskilled, while some unskilled jobs, with the addition of machinery have required skill and attention."

Director Hill, who was a member of President Hoover's unemployment commission and who is also serving with the United States department of labor, pointed out that there has been a large demand towards certain types of occupations in the adaptation of the negro to his new economic situation. He stated that there was not only competition at the present time between white and colored workers, teaching as a vocation.

Nurse Kills Patient In Macedonian Feud

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Jan. 5.—(AP) The recent battle between rival Macedonian tribes in the king's palace had a sensational aftermath last night when a hospital nurse attending Christo Trojanoff, who was wounded and captured after having fatally wounded the editor Estimoff, drew a pistol and fired three shots into her patient, killing him.

This brings the number of deaths in connection with the attack on Estimoff to four—one policeman, one employee of the war office, Trojanoff and the editor himself.

But between colored workers and colored workers. At one time, there was a demand for college trained negroes for some positions, but, as the number of negroes increased, it became necessary for them to find other things to do. The old breeds have perished. One of the fields being turned to now is the relatively new field of social work, and this has become the second choice for many who formerly would have chosen school teaching as a vocation.
